Applications now open for the 2019 Delirium Boot Camp!

Interested in expanding your expertise as a delirium researcher? Consider applying for the 2019 Delirium Boot Camp, an intensive 2-day course in delirium research. The Boot Camp is led by Drs. Donna Fick and Wes Ely, and includes workshops and lectures by leading delirium researchers including Drs. Sharon Inouye, Richard Jones, Edward Marcantonio, Pratik Pandharipande, and Thomas Trivison.

Due to limited space, participation in the Boot Camp is by application only. Applications are due by June 24, 2019. Visit <https://deliriumnetwork.org/career-development/boot-camp-application/> for more information and to download the application.

ABOUT DELIRIUM BOOT CAMP

The Delirium Boot Camp was founded in 2013 through a career development award to Dr. Sharon K. Inouye to establish the Center for Excellence for Delirium in Aging: Research, Training and Educational Enhancement (CEDARTREE). The Delirium Boot Camp has now evolved to be a major activity of the NIDUS Mentorship and Career Development Task Force, under leadership of Donna M. Fick, PhD, MSN, and E. Wes Ely, MD, MPH. There are now over 70 alumni of the Delirium Boot Camp program, which has expanded to include international participants as well as participants from across the United States and Canada. The Boot Camp includes didactic session on a variety of delirium-specific research topics ranging from biomarkers to qualitative research, as well as a mock grant review, CAM training and more.

The 2019 Boot Camp is intended for persons with previous research training and experience. Faculty and research fellows who meet the following criteria are eligible to attend:

- Previous training in the fundamentals of clinical research
- At least 1-2 years of previous research experience
- Hold an MD, PhD, or other doctoral level degree (may consider strong advanced predoctoral candidates in this area)
- Interest and passion for delirium research
- Must have 50% protected time for research
- Once accepted, willingness to devote 8-10 hours of advance preparation time for the Bootcamp (beyond preparing the application and proposal)
