NIA Funds 4 Delirium Research Pilots!

NIDUS Is Now Funded for FOUR $50,000 Delirium Research Pilot Grants

Apply for 2020-2021 Pilot Grants by November 7!

"These grants have helped to launch and advance the careers of many trainees and junior faculty in the delirium field."

– Sharon Inouye, MD

Dear NIDUS friends and fellow delirium investigators,

The deadline to submit an application for the NIDUS Pilot Grants is upcoming on November 7. To spread the word and ensure a diverse, wide pool of applicants, we are asking that you please forward this email to your mentees and organizational contacts.

NIDUS will be offering four $50,000 pilot grants for proposals related to delirium research. The purpose of these awards is to encourage innovative research that will advance investigation in delirium and lead to future grant funding. More information is available on our website at: <https://deliriumnetwork.org/pilots/>

Two application tracks are available:

- Junior Investigator, aimed for new investigators who plan to dedicate a significant portion of their professional effort on delirium.
- Established investigator, aimed at established researchers who aim to use the pilot money to newly enter the field of delirium research.

Anyone with a proposal related to delirium is eligible to apply. Priority themes for this year are:

1. Interrelationship of delirium and dementia
2. Innovative studies to identify more effective prevention or treatment approaches for delirium
3. Elucidating delirium pathophysiology

International (non-U.S. based) applicants are eligible. The deadline for submission is November 7, 2019 at 5:00pm EST.

Thank you in advance for your help in spreading the word!
